

Peter Champness, currently Chairman of technology company SolaQuaGen and a director of enterprise risk management group Itrium is a chartered surveyor and former partner of Gerald Eve. He has had over his career a particular focus on business, investment and finance and has undertaken a wide range of major international projects involving property, business consultancy, valuation and finance.

Until recently as Managing Director of the LCS group of companies he was responsible for carrying out commercial due diligence, strategic corporate advice, and valuations for financial institutions, private equity houses, government agencies and businesses.

He is a former Chairman and Secretary General of the European Group of Valuers' Associations and headed a team from the City University Business School on behalf of the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors advising the European Commission on risk associated with commercial real estate lending and bank solvency ratios. Subsequently he was part of a team at the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors commenting on asset based bank lending in the context of Basle II to the European Commission and Bank of International Settlements.

He is the author of the third edition of the Approved European Property Valuation Standards and has written extensively on property valuation as well as speaking extensively at international conferences and on radio and television.